

EVER WISH YOUR CAR HAD ONE MORE BUTTON?

Distracting passengers are not just annoying; they're dangerous. So, when a friend distracts you, consider using two words: Just chill. Whether or not you're in the driver's seat, you can take on today's number one teen killer – car crashes. As a passenger, show respect. As a driver, take control.

Ride Like A Friend. Drive Like You Care.

RideLikeAFriend.com

State Farm

The Children's Hospital
of Philadelphia®

RESEARCH INSTITUTE

Please don't risk your friends' lives. Drive them when you are ready: Newly licensed drivers should wait 1,000 miles or six months before offering rides to a teen, scientific evidence shows. Drivers should wait a full year before driving more than one teen.